

Noblis and EXP Pharmaceutical Services Corp. Expand their Relationship to Drive Increased Patient Safety via Healthcare System Recall Services

FALLS CHURCH, Va. and FREMONT, Ca.—May 12, 2011—Noblis, the provider of the RASMAS recall management service, has expanded its relationship with EXP Pharmaceutical Services Corp. to offer the best-in-class solution for managing recalled products in the healthcare supply chain. EXP will aggressively expand its sales offering to include bringing the RASMAS enterprise solution to healthcare systems.

"EXP and RASMAS are innovative leaders in the healthcare recall market," said EXP CEO Gus Changaris. "Teaming with Noblis enables us to deliver an end-to-end solution for managing, tracking, and disposing of recalled materials. This new relationship will enhance and expand the services of both companies and improve the overall safety and efficiency of the healthcare supply chain."

RASMAS is a simple-to-use, web-based service that provides comprehensive notification, distribution, and management of product alerts and recalls for healthcare and consumer products used in healthcare facilities. RASMAS proactively disseminates recall notifications and has an automated online workflow program.

EXP provides reverse distribution services for the return and destruction of expired and recalled pharmaceuticals. EXP serves hospital, government, independent retail, chain-store, clinic, and long-term-care pharmacies. Today, EXP is providing on-site returns and consulting services to nearly 70 percent of all U.S. hospitals.

"We are excited about expanding our partnership with EXP to include their direct sales of the entire RASMAS solution," says Diane Hartingh Price, director Health Innovation, Noblis. "Built on our relationship over the past year, that included delivering innovative solutions for pharmacy recalls and reverse distribution, our enhanced relationship will help improve our nation's patient safety."
